

Trudeau: Canada isn't broken; Questions by Lilley

December 22, 2022

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said that Canada isn't broken.

Bank of Canada Governor Tiff Macklem said that monetary policy is working and he expected inflation to return to the central bank's 2% target by 2024. Canada's headline inflation rate dropped to 7.0% in August, with core inflation running at about 5%.

He added that there was scope for slowing the economy, since the economy had a large number of job vacancies in the labor market.

Earlier Poilievre had said, "It feels like everything is broken in this country right now." He referred to the findings of massive waste in Covid-19 expenses by the federal Auditor General Karen Hogan. He mentioned the issues of inflation, the high cost of housing, the tent cities that have popped up across the country, record foodbank use, increasing taxes, the government's inability to properly deal with Chinese interference in our elections etc.

Brian Lilley's in his column discussed the issue of delays of up to 62 months in processing time for a skilled person. He pointed out that the military is demoralized, underfunded and understaffed to such an extent that recently Canada could not deploy troops in Haiti.

DiGiNews360 believes Canada is a great country to live and for all Canadians to take pride in it. Canadian democracy will pull through in spite of all the problems, created by Covid-19 and Ukraine war or all the issues, like attacks on the Federation of Canada in Alberta and in Quebec or the issues of non-governance or mis-governance today, yesterday or in all the previous years.
